About the artist and the album

"Craft Songs" is Francesca De Fazi's latest album to be released September 13 2019 via Noja Recordings.

Francesca De Fazi is an Italian songwriter and guitarist from Rome, Italy. She has called herself the Roman Blues Woman since she recorded one of her early albums in New Orleans years ago. Francesca has over 20 years of experience in music with a large background in studio and television recordings as well as live shows all around the world. She has collaborated with jazz, blues and pop artists such as Scott Henderson, Stefano Di Battista, Marcello Rosa, Andy J. Forest, Roberto Ciotti, Louisiana Red, Taj Mahal, Rory Block, Edoardo Bennato, Alex Britti, Grazia Di Michele, Mario Biondi, Amii Stewart.

Francesca describes the 11 tracks of "Craft Songs" as being "tied together with water, tears, sea, whiskey, rain, blood and amniotic fluid." Even if the blues come to mind while first listening to the album, the music is much more than that. The album combines experimentations, research, ideas matured on the road and in Francesca's dreams.

The lyrics are about timeless topics, "I am still very angry, civilly speaking, like all of us after all, forced to live in a society that no longer holds the confrontation with human reality," Francesca says.

"Craft Songs" was recorded at Rubedo Recordings Studio in Torino, Italy with an all new band including Manuel Volpe on bass guitar, Simone Pozzi on drums, Nicola Meloni on keyboards, all led by the extravagant producer Carlo Barbagallo.
